

"I haven't been paid in three weeks— but I've kept flying."

How long would you work without getting paid?

How long could you sustain your family?

Aloha
pilots are doing just that.
Working without pay, without
health insurance,
and without any commitment that there will be jobs,
decent working conditions, and security after any sale takes place. We keep delivering the goods you have come to rely on, even as our families struggle to pay the bills.

Aloha pilots know how important timely air cargo is to the Hawaiian economy. That's why we have made sacrifices in the past and will continue to make sacrifices. That's why we've kept flying, even though we haven't been paid since mid-April and haven't had health insurance since March 31. We put our futures—and our families—at risk to keep Aloha planes in the air.

Paid for by the Air Line Pilots Association, Int'l (affiliated with AFL-CIO and CLC)

Aloha pilots are committed to providing needed cargo services—but not at the cost of our future and our families.
